¹ The JDS Project places great value on building networking with Japanese government officials and companies related to development issues, with the aim of nurturing future leaders and capable government officials in each country. As there is strong interest in internships at central ministries, local governments, and private companies, we evaluate internships and training opportunities at such organizations.

		Opportunities to interact with Japanese students (methods for providing exchange and study opportunities ²)
4	Result of teaching foreign student (including JDS)	Accepted foreign students Activities(or network development) among ex-foreign students
		Achievements and lessons learned from above foreign students
5	Other support (foreign students center, dormitory, Japanese culture experience, regional exchange, welfare, etc.)

² The JDS Project places importance on building networks with Japanese students, with the aim of nurturing future leaders who are well-acquainted with Japan. We value environments where JDS Fellows can study and interact closely with Japanese students, such as through the assignment of Japanese tutors or participation in small group seminars.
