	Association of Corporate Executives, as well as from the local community of Minami-Uonuma region, Niigata. IUJ's mission is to develop future leaders in the globalized world, and for this purpose, it was initiated as the first English-medium graduate school in Japan. IUJ has accepted about 4,170 students from 122 countries and has successfully established its long-standing reputation as a unique educational and research institution known as "mini United Nations." IUJ campus is multinational. In any given year, about 50 overseas countries are represented within the student population. Students can learn how to work with different cultural, historical and social backgrounds in ways that are not easily possible anywhere else. One of the strengths of IUJ is that overseas students live together on campus and study with Japanese students who can introduce them to various sides of Japanese society and culture. Before IUJ's Graduation Ceremony for 2017 was held on June 24, IUJ had about 355 students from 55 countries including 12 from Afghanistan, 11 Bangladesh, 1 Brazil, 14 Cambodia, 4 China, 1 Fiji, 1 Georgia, 7 India, 16 Indonesia, 1 Jordan, 2 Kazakhstan, 9 Kyrgyzstan, 12 Laos, 2 Malaysia, 11 Mongolia, 52 Myanmar, 7 Nepal, 4 Pakistan, 14 Philippines, 1 Saudi Arabia, 1 Slovak Republic, 1 Solomon Islands, 5 Sri Lanka, 4 Tajikistan, 14 Thailand, 5 USA, 12 Uzbekistan, 1 UK, 24 Vietnam, 80 from African countries.
12. Features of Graduate School	The Graduate School of International Relations (GSIR) has been offering international education in English in accordance with global standards since its inception. GSIR equips students with essential political, economic, and management skills as well as historical and cultural perspectives so that they may become specialists who understand, analyze a wide range of international issues and problems, contribute proactively, and lead the way to resolve the issues that the world is facing. GSIR, utilizing the experiences of Japan and the Asia-Pacific region, encourages students to examine these issues within a broad and coherent theoretical and empirical framework in the course of their two-year study. GSIR is designed to also help students acquire a long-term vision of the rapidly changing world, appreciate diverse perspectives in global and local contexts, and enhance their level of knowledge and problem-solving capabilities in contemporary international affairs. By going through a process of writing a thesis under supervisors who went through vigorous graduate work themselves at top-notch universities in the USA, the UK and Australia etc., students will be trained to develop the ability to identify and analyze the issues at a depth and develop problem-solving capabilities and apply these acquired skills and knowledge in their future career after graduation. Students and faculty members have a strong desire to strengthen their capacity; to evaluate important practical policies in government, public institutions, and other organizations; and to find better policies and solutions to the issues. To facilitate the objectives of GSIR, four separate but interrelated graduate programs are currently offered: the International Development Program (IDP), the Public Management and Policy Analysis Program (PMPP), Public Policy Program (PPP) (One-Year Program) and the International Relations Program (IRP). GSIR also offers two supporting language programs, the English Language Program and the Japanese Language Program, which global standards. Such measures as course syllabus, GPA-based grading, and course evaluations by students which are made public in the following term, have been fully implemented since the early 1990s.

	There has been an increasing demand for intensive programs that can provide short-term graduate-level education for employees of public institutions and private enterprises. To meet such high demand, the Graduate School of International Relations (GSIR) establishes the One-year intensive program called "Public Policy Program (PPP)," which consists of the following three concentrations under current three two-year regular programs: International Relations Program (IRP), International Development Program (IDP), and Public Management and Policy Analysis Program (PMPP):
	 (1) International Affairs (2) Economic Development (3) Public Management
	The objective of one-year intensive master' program is to equip the scholars with fundamental knowledge and practical skills in the fields of international relations, international development, and public management. The main target includes employees in private enterprises and public institutions, who intend to obtain a master's degree at the professional level with less workload of academic research activities. Students who complete all requirements are awarded a professional master's degree, Master of Public Policy. Applicants who would like to enter the program should have a minimum of 2 years of work experience.
13. Features and Curriculum of Program	Necessary Curriculum to Obtain the Degree The curriculum of one-year intensive master's programs consists mainly of intensive coursework with less research requirement, which enables scholars to obtain a master's degree within one year, while two-year regular programs put more emphasis on master's thesis as an output of research activities in additional to the coursework. All courses are conducted in English. The curriculum of the one-year master's program consists of a combination of required courses and elective courses: the former provides analytical and empirical skills and knowledge that are applicable to policy-oriented issues; the latter focuses more on specific aspects of practical and policy-oriented issues and expands the theoretical capacity and descriptive knowledge obtained from the required courses. This combination allows the scholars to facilitate problem identification and problem solving in regional and international agendas. Policy Paper
	Policy Paper Differently from the two-year master's programs, the scholars are not required to write a solid master's thesis. However, instead of a master's thesis, they are required to write a policy paper on an important policy-related topic under the supervision of faculty members. This gives the scholars an opportunity to learn how to discuss their policy topic by integrating the concepts and methods that have been acquired during the entire one-year program as well as the knowledge that had been developed in their previous professional careers.

16. Message to Prospective International Students

Message	from	University

The Graduate School of International Relations (GSIR) warmly welcomes students through the Pacific-LEADS. Our university has successfully established its long-standing reputation as a unique educational and research institution known as "mini United Nations." As of July 2017, the number of IUJ alumni has reached 4,173, representing 122 countries including 107 from Bangladesh, 12 Bhutan, 1 Brunei, 77 Cambodia, 209 China, 2 East Timor, 161 India, 545 Indonesia, 30 Korea, 11 Kazakhstan, 55 Kyrgyz Republic, 73 Lao P.D.R., 76 Malaysia, 89 Mongolia, 179 Myanmar, 38 Nepal, 17 Oceanian Countries, 149 Philippines, 67 Sri Lanka, 18 Tajikistan, 165 Thailand, 96 Uzbekistan, 150 Vietnam and 229 from 32 African countries.

IUJ offers a friendly and exciting academic environment in which the views, values, ideas and experiences of students from about 50 countries are not only shared, but also analyzed and reexamined thoroughly through continuous interaction among students and faculty members.

Dean's Message:

As the dean of the GSIR, I am proud to affirm that the success of our program is owed in large part to the dedication of each faculty member. Our faculty is unique in that almost all of members have been awarded her/his Ph.D. degree by reputable universities abroad, which is unseen anywhere else in Japan. This constitutes the basis for all faculty members being dedicated researchers as well as teachers in a number of ways. In addition to the fact that all courses are taught in English, the faculty members' study experience abroad contributes to international understanding as well as understanding what it's like to be a student in a foreign country. But most importantly, all members of the GSIR are competent academics, since they are actively involved in research, witnessed by publications in highly ranked academic journals.

Fueled by the earnest desire of the students and faculty members to contribute to equalizing the opportunities of people in all countries of the world, it is the mission of the GSIR to train our students to strengthen their capacity to observe, analyze, and participate in socio-economic development. Our students also play a substantial role in making our program successful through hard work and persistence in finding solutions to challenging issues. What we offer our students is a highly educational program that is designed to guide them to ask the right questions and to master the use of scientific tools provided by social science for objective, critical and logical analyses of socio-economic observations. With a solid curriculum accompanied by rigorous training that is unique to the GSIR, the dedicated faculty members all look forward to welcoming new students through the Pacific-LEADS.

Please refer to the http://www.iuj.ac.jp/gsir/message/ for details.

IUJ has its own tradition to produce a complete graduate equipped with enough technical skills which will help him/her to be a future leader. You can meet the very good faculty here who are very good at teaching and always willing to help students in their problems.

Voice of International StudentsIUJ has students from several countries over the world; therefore, IUJ is a very good place for cultural exchange and to build cross cultural understanding. This is one of the biggest benefits of this university. You cannot be alone in IUJ. The reason is students have many programs and club activities to participate. No doubt that this is a good opportunity for me to improve my knowledge, make friends and build a strong network of relationships with officials from several countries in the world.

I warmly welcome you to IUJ, where the world gathers.
(Lao PDR, Ministry of Finance Class of 2015)
IUJ is a very good university to study graduate program. The courses offered here are very modern and comprehensive. That's why every student including myself has to study hard. In addition, the professors are very competitive and knowledgeable. The IUJ campus and other facilities are very good too. Different sports and lots of parties are organized frequently. However the most interesting thing is the diversity of students from different countries. The long time snowfall is sometimes boring and monotonous. Sometimes too much pressure to study but it is o.k. Overall, IUJ is a very good university for higher study.
