11. Features of University	Nagasaki University is a multi-faculty university, located in Nagasaki, one of the oldest cities in Japan. It has nine faculties/schools and seven graduate schools, and comprises three campus sites, in Bunkyo, Sakamoto and Katafuchi. The total area of the university, including affiliated facilities, is 662,000m ² .
12. Features of Graduate School	Through the Fukushima Daiichi nuclear power plant accident in March 2011, it was revealed that we currently face a shortage of experts, including nurses and public health nurses, in the field of disaster and radiation exposure medical science, such as emergency radiation exposure medical services professionals and radiation health risk communications specialists. In the future, the spread of radiation diagnoses/therapies, and personnel training in the field of disaster and radiation exposure medical science, will be huge challenges in Japan and abroad, especially in other Asian countries where the construction of nuclear power plants is progressing. Since Nagasaki University and Fukushima Medical University made a great efforts in radiation exposure medical science and radiation risk science, the institutions both gained valuable experience from the Great East Japan Earthquake, and education faculties in disaster medical science opened the “Disaster and Radiation Medical Sciences,” taking advantage of the best characteristics of each university to begin personnel training in this field.
13. Features and Curriculum of Program	This course will train students in how to deal with various disasters, including radiation accidents, based on specialized knowledge. The program will include medical treatment and crisis communication at the time of a disaster, planning and disaster prevention efforts, and providing mental care before and after a disaster.
14. Academic Schedule	After enrollment, in the first year, students will enroll in the common, basic subjects that are requirement for both courses. Subsequently, they will enroll in specialized subjects according to their respective courses. In the second year, students complete the specialized practical training program, conduct a research project, and write a Master’s thesis.
