JICA and Official Development Assistance (ODA)

- Technical Cooperation
 Technical Cooperation supports the development of human resources that will promote socioeconomic development in developing countries, the improvement of technical standards, and the establishment of administrative systems by utilizing the knowledge, experience, and technologies of Japan.
- Grant Aid
 Grants provide funds to developing countries with low income levels without the obligation of repayment. It is used to finance the development of basic infrastructure, including schools, hospitals, water-supply facilities, and roads, as well as the procurement of equipment and other supplies.
- Loan Aid
 ODA Loans support developing countries above a certain income level by providing low-interest, long-term, and concessional funds to develop chiefly the area of socioeconomic infrastructure.

Private-Sector Investment Finance (PSIF)
 PSIF refers to a type of ODA financing scheme implemented by JICA, and is provided to private companies carrying out projects in developing countries as investments and loans for its necessary funds. Although such projects create jobs and revitalize the economy of hosting countries, it entails various risks, and high return cannot often be expected. Thus, existing financial institutions are often reluctant to provide these companies with sufficient loans. PSIF provides investments and loans for projects that are considered highly effective from a development perspective, but may be difficult to be sufficiently funded by existing financial institutions only. PSIF assists in the following fields for funding: i. infrastructure development and accelerating growth, ii. SDGs (including poverty reduction, measures against climate change).

 E/N: Signing of Exchange of Notes
 L/A: Signing of Japanese ODA Loan Agreement

*Furthermore, JICA supports the resolution of issues in developing countries through a flexible combination of various types of assistances, which include Dispatch of Volunteers, JICA Partnership Program with NGOs and Training Program in Japan.
