Japan Initiative for the future of Syrian Refugees (JISR) 2025

This handout provides an overview of the “Japan Initiative for the future of Syrian Refugees (JISR)” program/course, which is one of Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA)’s Knowledge Co-Creation Program (Long-Term). The program will be implemented as part of the Official Development Assistance of the Government of Japan based on bilateral agreement between respective governments.

This program will be implemented as part of the Official Development Assistance of the Government of Japan based on an agreement between the Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA) and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR).

The objective of the Knowledge Co-Creation Program (Long-Term) is to offer opportunities to people from developing countries to study at higher educational institutions in Japan and to help them build their network of people. This is intended to assist in the human resource development plans of the governments of developing countries and Japan, and eventually to expand and strengthen bilateral ties between the developing countries and Japan.

0. Background

What is JICA Knowledge Co-Creation Program (KCCP)

The Japanese Cabinet released the Development Cooperation Charter in June 2023, which stated, “In its development cooperation, Japan has maintained the spirit of jointly creating things that suit partner countries while respecting ownership, intentions and intrinsic characteristics of the country concerned based on a field-oriented approach through dialogue and collaboration. It has also maintained the approach of building reciprocal relationships with developing countries in which both sides learn from each other and grow and develop together.” JICA believes that this ‘Knowledge Co-Creation Program’ will serve as a foundation of mutual learning process.

What is JICA Development Studies Program (JICA-DSP)

JICA-DSP is being carried out by JICA as part of official development assistance (ODA) by the government of Japan. JICA-DSP is offered for international scholars accepted as the participants of JICA’s Human Resource Development Project who are enrolled in a degree program at a Japanese university.

1. Overview

More than six millions of Syrians have been forced to leave their home country and fled to neighboring countries and beyond since the conflict started in 2011, and the majority of these refugees have been staying in host communities. Under their severe and harsh living conditions, the international community is required to support those refugees from a humanitarian standpoint. The protracted crisis is depriving the refugees from their opportunities to study, which is likely to become the main reason for considerable loss of human resources for the reconstruction of the Syrian Arab Republic (hereinafter referred to as “Syria”) in the future.

Against this backdrop, the Japanese government announced in May 2016 that Japan would accept Syrian young personnel as students with the aim of offering educational opportunities to Syrian youths who will contribute to Syria’s future reconstruction when it takes place. Accordingly, the Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA) has established the program “Japanese Initiative for the future of Syrian Refugees” (hereinafter referred to as “JISR”) in cooperation with United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) for providing higher education opportunities at a Master’s degree level in Japanese universities to Syrian refugees who are staying in neighboring countries.

2. Objectives

The objective of JISR is to support Syrian refugees who have potential to contribute to the reconstruction of Syria in the future. This program offers opportunities for young Syrian refugees (hereinafter referred to as “Participants”) to study in graduate courses for their Master’s degrees at Japanese universities. This program intends to foster capable Syrian individuals to lead Syria’s reconstruction and peacebuilding efforts at an appropriate time in the future, while enhancing their understanding of Japanese people, society and systems so as to strengthen the mutual friendship between Syria and Japan.

1) Intensive Japanese Study

Spending the 1st year in a designated organization to focus on studying Japanese prior to enter the university, in which you wish to obtain your Master's degree. You will concentrate on Japanese learning so that when you start your Master's course in the 2nd year, you can understand (read, write, listen and speak) Japanese at the certain level. This enables you to brush up your Japanese skill at the same time of studying in your Master's course in order to get N2 level of Japanese test* which is basic requirement by companies in Japan if you wish to find a job in Japan.

* Japanese-Language Proficiency Test (<https://www.jlpt.jp/e/index.html>)

2) Research Student (Mandatory for participants who applied for Hiroshima university)

Enrolling at the university, prior to starting your Master's course, as "research student" for the 1st year (maximum of 1 year) is optional for the participants who are fluent in Japanese or mandatory for participants who applied for Hiroshima university. Research Student is a part-time student who utilizes time to prepare for the admission examination for a Master's course. Research Students can receive instruction from supervisors and make use of university facilities. It is required for the students who are accepted to Hiroshima University to spend 6 months as "Research Student" while taking Intensive Japanese Study training.

You will apply for the entrance examination for the Master's course for both 1) and 2) in a designated period by each university. If a participant fails the entrance examination for the Master's course, he/she will be disqualified as a JISR participant and will not be able to receive any allowance from JICA. The participant and family members may need to apply for another status of residence that will allow them to remain in Japan until such time as they are no longer in need of international protection.

After spending the 1st year studying Intensive Japanese and/or studying as Research Student, JISR participants will enroll at the university as master's course students in the second year. You will graduate within 2 years and need to find a job in Japan if you wish to stay in Japan.

Please refer to Annex 5. "5. Standard timetable (Years needed for graduation)" of university which you wish to enter. You will find the similar sentences as below.

Teaching Assistant/Research Assistant in the university with remuneration as well as Paid Internship maybe permitted if that does not interfere with your study/research and approved by your academic supervisor.

- (6) Not to change accommodation without the permission of JICA.
- (7) Not to leave Japan without the approval of JICA.

17. Study and Life in Japan

Providing high academic standards and attractive programs

Japanese scientists have been awarded Nobel Prizes in Physics, Physiology or Medicine and Chemistry. The numbers of degree programs conducted in English are increasing. This environment allows you to learn cutting-edge science and technology in Japan. You can also study not only law, economics, science and engineering, but also environment, information and disaster prevention.

Moreover, Japan uses technology which has been developed over many years for technical cooperation in developing countries. In addition, students from all over the world such as Africa and Asia to the Middle East, Europe and the US, come to conduct research at Japan's graduate schools. These networks are sustained even after graduation.

Seeking employment in Japan after graduation

It is not easy for international students to be hired by Japanese companies. A high level of Japanese language ability as well as communication and professional skills are considered important by companies when hiring international students. Therefore, learning Japanese language and culture is strongly encouraged. In job hunting activities, internships are valuable opportunities to gain work experience. Some benefits and goals of participating in internships include experiencing Japanese labor practice, learning Japanese business manners and utilizing what they experience in internships to examine and select industries.

For more information about the employment of international students in Japan, please have a look at the following website.

https://www.jasso.go.jp/en/ryugaku/after_study_i/job/guide.html

Learning in an international environment

International students from more than 170 countries and regions of the world are studying at universities and Japanese language schools in Japan. Recently, student dormitories where international students and Japanese students live together have been increasing in number. They offer a broader view of Japan as well as diverse cultures of the world.

Challenges of studying abroad

Although studying abroad is an opportunity to understand other people's thoughts and cultures, international students often face challenges in adjusting to new academic and social environments.

For example, in Japanese graduate schools, students are required to actively participate in field research and laboratory activities in addition to attending lectures. Students must demonstrate a positive attitude both in lectures and coursework rather than passively listening to what the professor says. Please do not forget that your professor may rate your academic score lower if you are not punctual or slip out of the classroom too often.

In addition, according to statistics, foreign residents represent 2% of the total Japanese population and the literacy rate of Japanese is more than 99%, which means that people use Japanese language in everyday life basically everywhere including public and administrative organizations. Unfortunately, such an environment makes it very difficult for non-Japanese speaking people living in Japan without any assistance.

To make both your academic and private life smooth and peaceful in Japan, you may need to make extraordinary efforts.

Japan Development Studies Program

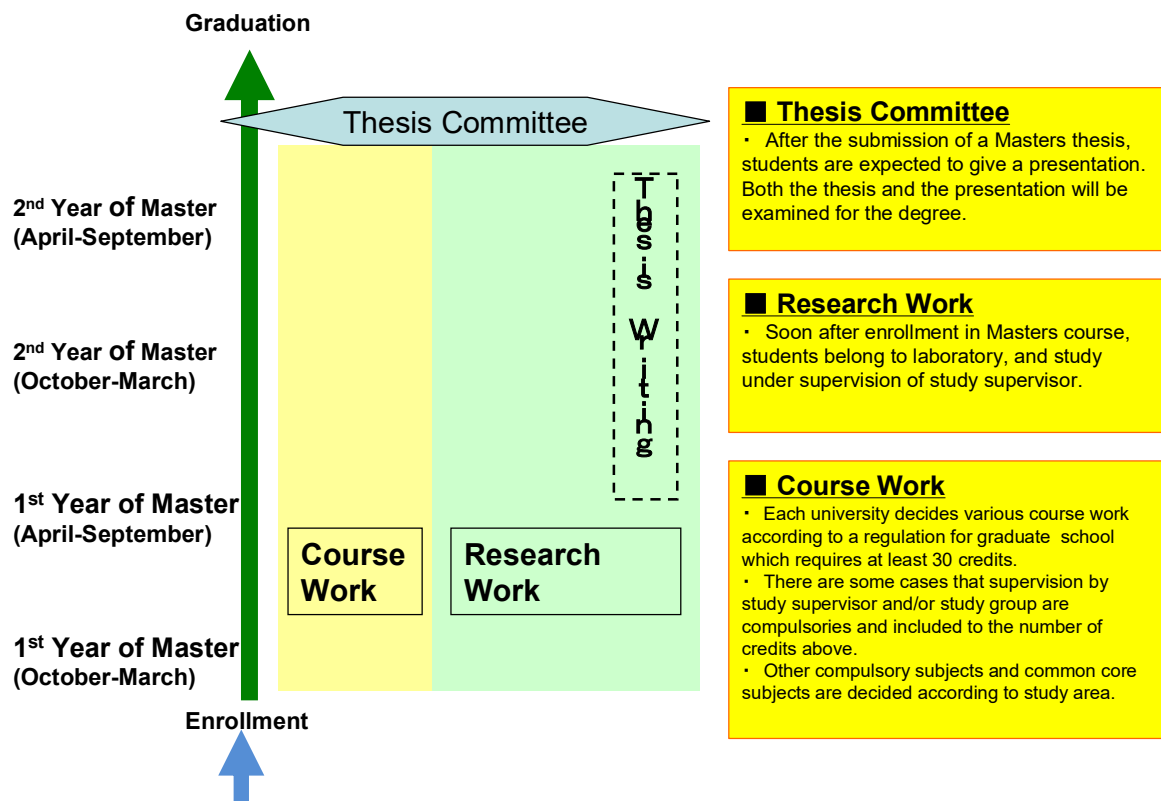

Participants have an opportunity to join in Japan Development Studies Program (JICA-DSP). ◆ Graduate School System in Japan: Example

Period for intensive Japanese study / Research Student (Maximum of 12 months)

- Curriculum:

Compared to US Master's programs, there are less compulsory modules and common core modules in Master's programs in Japan.

Soon after enrollment in a Master's program in a Japanese university, students are expected to begin their research activities in a laboratory (or Kenkyushitsu in Japanese) according to their choices. There is an advantage that students can experience research work from early period of their Master's course.

Taking classes with a passive attitude is frowned upon at graduate school in Japan - students are expected to have an independent mind to conduct research based on their own research theme.

- Requirements for completing a degree:

According to graduate school regulations, the average required number of credits is about 30. However, you need to confirm the university information, as the number of modules required to complete a degree differs depending on the university.
