How do we develop Startup Ecosystem?

Understand the policies and measures for building and developing of startup ecosystems in Japan and the Tokyo metropolitan area to formulate and implement policies in participant's own countries, and build relationship with startup ecosystem actors and consider future collaboration.

Outline

This program is designed for personnel of startup-related central/local ministries, public/private incubation/acceleration/innovation hub, etc. in countries and cities of which the startup ecosystem is relatively in the middle to late growth stage.

Participants will visit and receive lectures from public/private startup ecosystem actors (central/local ministries and agencies, investors such as venture capitals (VC), incubation and acceleration facilities, research and educational institutions such as universities, companies which invest in or have business collaboration with startups, Japanese startups, etc.) and formulate an action plan while exchange information and opinions between participants.

Format: Online including on demand & Face-to-Face (in-Japan)

*After completion of Online program, participants can participate in "In-Japan program".

Language: English

Course Capacity: 13 participants (12 counties)

JICA Knowledge Co-Creation Program (KCCP)

The Japanese Cabinet released the Development Cooperation Charter in June 2023, stated that “In its development cooperation, Japan has maintained the spirit of jointly creating things that suit partner countries while respecting ownership, intentions and intrinsic characteristics of the country concerned based on a field oriented approach through dialogue and collaboration. It has also maintained the approach of building reciprocal relationships with developing countries in which both sides learn from each other and grow and develop together.” We believe that this ‘Knowledge Co-Creation Program’ will serve as a foundation of mutual learning process.

For What?

Background

Population growth and large market, social issues, possibility of DX, these factors tend to come together in developing countries. Under the situation of these factors combined, it potentially boosts technological innovation. Also, some social issues have been solved by innovative startups. Therefore, it is important to promote and to grow startups.

However, the startup ecosystems which could promote and support startups, has not yet developed sufficiently in developing countries.

JICA is working on to support building and developing startup ecosystems to realize the environment in which innovative startups are continuously and autonomously created and nurtured.

This program aims participants to learn how to establish and enhance startup ecosystem and entrepreneurs, organize issues of startup ecosystem in their countries, and develop measures to strengthen startup ecosystem in their countries.

Objectives

- Understand the policies and measures for building and developing startup ecosystems in Japan and the Tokyo metropolitan area, and while exchanging information with its actors, be able to formulate and implement policies and measures that suit to their own countries and cities.
- Build relationships with Japanese actors and consider future collaboration.
- Formulate an action plan to enhance startup ecosystem for achieving above objectives.

JICA and Capacity Development

Technical cooperation is people-to-people cooperation that supports partner countries in enhancing their comprehensive capacities to address development challenges by their own efforts. Instead of applying Japanese technology per se to partner countries, JICA's technical cooperation provides solutions that best fit their needs by working with people living there. In the process, consideration is given to factors such as their regional characteristics, historical background, and languages. JICA does not limit its technical cooperation to human resources development; it offers multi-tiered assistance that also involves organizational strengthening, policy formulation, and institution building.

Implementation methods of JICA's technical cooperation can be divided into two approaches. One is overseas cooperation by dispatching experts and volunteers in various development sectors to partner countries; the other is domestic cooperation by inviting participants from developing countries to Japan. The latter method is the Knowledge Co-Creation Program, formerly called Training Program, and it is one of the core programs carried out in Japan. By inviting officials from partner countries and with cooperation from domestic partners, the Knowledge Co-Creation Program provides technical knowledge and practical solutions for development issues in participating countries.

The Knowledge Co-Creation Program (Group & Region Focus) has long occupied an important place in JICA operations. About 400 pre-organized courses cover a wide range of professional fields, ranging from education, health, infrastructure, energy, trade and finance, to agriculture, rural development, gender mainstreaming, and environmental protection. A variety of programs is being customized by the different target organizations to address the specific needs, such as policy-making organizations, service provision organizations, as well as research and academic institutions. Some programs are organized to target a certain group of countries with similar developmental challenges.

Japanese Development Experience

Japan, as the first non-Western nation to become a developed country, built itself into a country that is free, peaceful, prosperous and democratic while preserving its tradition. Japan will serve as one of the best examples for our partner countries to follow in their own development.

From engineering technology to production management methods, most of the know-how that has enabled Japan to become what it is today has emanated from a process of adoption and adaptation, of course, has been accompanied by countless failures and errors behind the success stories.

Through Japan's progressive adaptation and application of systems, methods and technologies from the West in a way that is suited to its own circumstances, Japan has developed a storehouse of knowledge not found elsewhere from unique systems of organization, administration and personnel management to such social systems as the livelihood improvement approach and governmental organization. It is not easy to apply such experiences to other countries where the circumstances differ, but the experiences can provide ideas and clues useful when devising measures to solve problems.

JICA, therefore, would like to invite as many leaders of partner countries as possible to come and visit us, to mingle with the Japanese people, and witness the advantages as well as the disadvantages of Japanese systems, so that integration of their findings might help them reach their developmental objectives.

This information pertains to one of the JICA Knowledge Co-Creation Programs (Group & Region Focus) of the Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA) implemented as part of the Official Development Assistance of the Government of Japan based on bilateral agreement between both Governments.
