

JICA

Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA) is an agency for Official Development Assistance (ODA) by the government of Japan.

Overseas Offices

Around 100 offices are located worldwide to promote projects in response to local needs.

Offices in Japan

JICA carries out diverse projects via domestic offices throughout Japan in cooperation with various organizations.

OIC is the southernmost of 15 domestic offices.

Okinawa International Center (OIC)

OIC covers Okinawa, one and only prefecture in Japan located at sub-tropical region. The island chain of Okinawa stretches over about one thousand kilometers from Kyushu to Taiwan. Okinawa has an area of approximately 2,281 square kilometers and a population of 1.4 million.

About 500 overseas participants stay at OIC annually for knowledge co-creation programs. ICT courses have been the mainstream since its establishment in 1985. Other courses including public health, environment management, and water supply, are programmed in advantage of Okinawa's subtropical and archipelagic characteristics.

OIC participants also enjoy various exchange programs with local people of full hospitality and have no time to become home-sick.

Aside from knowledge co-creation programs, OIC, through its international cooperation activities, supports Okinawan industries and people to develop in collaboration with local governments and enterprises.

Implementing various type of programs

General program is conducted for a short period time (1 to 2 months), but some programs are held over 1 year or more. In the scheme of Long-term Participants, OIC accepts young administrators, engineers, professors and practitioners who are responsible for the future of developing countries to acquire master's and/or doctor's degrees at higher education institutions such as universities in Okinawa. OIC accepts dozens of Long-term Participants from Africa, Oceania, Afghanistan and others.

There is also Nikkei training program aiming at contributing to the development of Latin American countries through training Japanese descendants in Latin America.

OIC also conducts Region-focused and country-focused programs to tackle specific issues in the specific regions and countries for the needs of recipient regions and countries.

Programs for Young Leaders

Young Leaders from developing countries are also invited to Japan. The program aims at nurturing workforces responsible for future nation-building through programs in the fields required in their respective countries. Sessions of workshops are held with Japanese experts, professors, officers, and university students of the same background. It is a good opportunity for Japanese counterparts to deepen mutual understanding.

Think Globally, Act Locally

As the implementing agency for official development assistance of Japan, JICA supports developing countries. However, are problems occurring in the world such as poverty, conflicts, wars, environmental issues and fear for human security abuses only a concern in those parts of the world?

Japanese society and our own lifestyles are deeply connected with and depending on these regions, and same problems also exist in Japan.

For this reason, OIC supports Development Education, in other words, Education is to encourage Japanese people, especially student and teacher to be more interested and more involved in international cooperation activities.

Development Education aims to help people to obtain consciousness of development-caused problems, to think about desired development, and to create world of equality and prosperity.

International Exchange Program with the local population

OIC promotes exchange programs between JICA participants and local communities through games, sports and joining local festivals. The programs deepen mutual understanding between Japan (Okinawa) and developing countries.

Partnership with Okinawan Enterprises

In recent years, 70% of the flow of funds from developed countries to developing countries has come from private funds. Private sector activities are vitally important in order to achieve economic growth and sustainable social development. Japan aims to enhance the quality of its ODA by the participation of the private sector and their advanced technologies and knowledge.

JICA makes efforts to promote public-private partnerships focused primarily on cooperation aimed at improving the business environment in developing countries and support infrastructure development and improvement of public services through PPP (Public-Private Partnership) in which government and private sector share responsibilities.

In addition, in March 2012, JICA became a member of the all-Japan support system for overseas business development of SMEs (Small Medium Enterprises), and initiated programs for supporting overseas expansion of SMEs. JICA's wide-ranging support schemes for the partnership with Japanese Private Sector as follows;

- SME Partnership Promotion Survey (For SMEs only)
- Feasibility Survey for the Private Sector for Utilizing Japanese Technologies in ODA Project (For SMEs only)
- Preparatory Survey for BOP Business Promotion
- Verification Survey with the Private Sector for Disseminating Japanese Technologies (For SMEs only)
- Collaboration program with the Private Sector for Disseminating Japanese Technologies
