

Grassroots Power in Action!

The JICA Partnership Program (herein after JPP) is the program supported by JICA which aims to implement development projects in developing countries planned by Japanese development partners, mainly NGOs, local governments and universities, based on their accumulated experiences and technologies in development at grassroots level.

JPP projects aim to be directly useful to the people in developing countries such as following examples.

The aim of this project is to improve community health condition in the Amazon River region through community Health worker's ability improvement, resident's nutritional modification and the hygiene knowledge improvement.
