In addition to participating in formal training and seminars, the participants got to know about Japanese culture by visiting shopping malls, museums and historical monuments in Nagoya.

JICA provided a 21-day training program to learn Japan's experience with government and NGO representatives from Belize, Ethiopia, Mongolia, Sri Lanka, Tajikistan, and Zimbabwe in Nagoya, Japan, as part of its activities to promote the employment of persons with disabilities.

Representatives of the six countries made presentations about the organization they work for. Among these six countries, Mongolia is the first country that has started a project to promote the employment support service for persons with disabilities with the support of JICA.
