Task team works all together for CAMP formulation.

Although South Sudan has immense agricultural potential, the country only produces about half of its cereal requirement. To cover the rest, it must supplement with significant food aid and imports. The Project has supported the formulation of the Comprehensive Agricultural Development Master Plan (CAMP) and developed capacities within relevant government ministries. Based on the findings of the situation analysis across the country, CAMP analyses all four subsectors (crops, livestock, forestry, and fisheries) to identify opportunities, constraints and development paths; it also frames 111 projects to achieve the vision of agricultural transformation up to the year 2040. After the completion of CAMP in May 2015, JICA is continuing to provide support to the government to set up the implementation mechanism and structure for CAMP as well as its supportive plan, the Irrigation Development Master Plan (IDMP).
