The Bach Mai Hospital Project for Functional Enhancement

Background
Established in 1911, the Bach Mai Hospital (BMH) has been playing an extremely important role as top referral hospital in the development of health care service in Northern Vietnam as well as training institution for Hanoi Medical University since then. However, the BMH has been suffering from various problems such as lacking in training of staff, insufficient medical equipment etc impeding its duties and roles.

The project aims at improving the quality of medical services provided by BMH, by focusing on total care services. To this end, BMH is expected to be a leading hospital that is responsible for other provincial hospitals to enhance their functions.
